The Salesman's Creed.

TO respect my profession, my company and myself. To be honest and fair with my company, as I expect my company to be honest and fair with me; to think of it with loyalty, speak of it with praise, and act always as a trustworthy custodian of its good name. To be a man whose word carries weight at my home office; to be a booster, not a knocker; a pusher, not a kicker; a motor, not a clog.

TO base my expectations of reward on a solid foundation of service rendered; to be willing to pay the price of success in honest effort. To look upon my work as opportunity, to be seized with joy and made the most of, and not as painful drudgery to be reluctantly endured.

TO remember that success lies within myself, in my own brain, my own ambition, my own courage and determination. To expect difficulties and force my way through them; to turn hard experience into capital for future struggles.

TO believe in my proposition heart and soul; to carry an air of optimism into the presence of possible customers; to dispell ill temper with cheerfulness, kill doubts with strong convictions and reduce active friction with an agreeable personality.

TO make a study of my business or line; to know my profession in every detail from the ground up: to mix brains with my efforts and use system and method in my work. To find time to do everything needful by never letting time find me doing nothing. To hoard days as a miser hoards dollars; to make every hour bring me dividends in commissions, increased knowledge or healthful recreation.

TO keep my future unmortgaged with debt; to save money as well as earn it; to cut out expensive amusements until I can afford them; to steer clear of dissipation and guard my health of body and peace of mind as my most precious stock in trade.

FINALLY, to take a good grip on the joy of life; to play the game like a gentleman; to fight against nothing so hard as my own weaknesses, and to endeavor to grow as a salesman and as a man with the passage of every day of time. THIS IS MY CREED.

The Routing and Controlling of Traveling Salesmen Systematized

... By the Rand-McNally Mercantile Recording System

MANUFACTURING and jobbing houses have always found the successful management of their agents and traveling men a most complex and difficult problem. This is due in no small measure to the natural disposition of salesmen to trespass upon each other's territory, particularly where towns of considerable importance are situated in close proximity to the dividing line.

In addition to this, and of still greater importance, is the manner in which salesmen (if not carefully and constantly watched) will skip the less promising towns in their field in order to reach the larger places.

While such tactics may result in a larger volume of business in a limited time, they can not in the end succeed, because they leave the territory only partially worked, while no commensurate saving in transportation or other expenses is effected.

These and other evils of a like nature well known to every manager are important factors in the problem, and the only means of overcoming them is to replace the complicated and inadequate methods generally employed, in the sales department with a simpler and more effective system.

The Rand-McNally Mercantile Recording System is an appliance specially designed to meet these requirements. With it the boundaries of agents' and traveling men's territories are so plainly marked with colored cords as to render confusion impossible. Every town to be visited is indicated by a tack of a color to represent the salesman in whose territory it is located, thus each man is confined to his own field and unless he visits every town indicated the fact is at once revealed to the operator of the system.
